Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!

A great deal of hue and cry has been made about the tramp. There has been a continual tramp to 36 Hammond Street, opposite the Court House, for years, for surplus clothing, articles of Jewelry made, repaired and engraved as it should be done in a first class manner, and I can stand it all the Fall.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

At Brooks, formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Lewiston, was thrown from his carriage a few days since in Detroit, Michigan, and so severely injured that he remains in a very critical condition. The upper portion of his body was paralyzed.

The Adventists of Lewiston and Auburn had a baptism last Sunday afternoon at the river and four candidates received baptism by immersion.

Ten days meeting of the Friends is to be held in Lewiston following the State convention of the Young Men's Christian Association for the purpose of continuing the work of the meetings and gathering in the sheaves. David Douglass of Indiana, J. B. Daniels of Worcester, Mass., and J. W. Jacob of China will be present at the meetings.

The Ancient Order of Shepherds dedicated a new hall in Lewiston Saturday evening.

Solemn and impressive services were held Sunday forenoon in the High Street Universalist church, Lewiston, in memory of the departed during the past year. Impressive services were conducted by the pastor Rev. J. C. Snow, who preached an effective sermon from John xvii. 24. Father I will that they also, whom thou hast given me be with me where I am.

Aroostook.

At the recent term of court at Houlton seven persons were convicted of selling liquor to various parts of Aroostook county, and were fined $625.34. The total amount of costs at the term were $45.13, so that the liquor fines paid the whole and left a balance in the treasury.

Frank Whitney arrived at Presque Isle on Saturday with a drove of 210 sheep gathered in the Mattawaska region.

The starch factory at Caribou is under way, and in full operation. It is doing a great business. Mr. Holmes, the proprietor, has made the most thorough repairs on the mill, and increased the capacity of the machines, dry house and cellar, so that he has doubled the capacity to make starch over that of last year. Last Thursday he took in one hundred and eighteen loads of potatoes. He works them up at the rate of one hundred bushels per hour, or one thousand bushels per day of ten hours. The factory is in perfect order, and he is doing a good business. This is a great aid to the farmers, for a market for potatoes, making a local market for their surplus potatoes, at cash rates.

Swan & Tongue of Caribou have a single mill that has cut 18,000 in an hour and average 6,000 thousand per hour every day.

The new school house at Caribou cost $2,000 and will seat seventy scholars. It is 28x60 two stories high. The seats and desks are of the most approved style.

The railroad running to Fort Fairfield is being graded all the way to Tobique and piles of sleepers are on the spot for a mile or more. The depot will be located near the centre of the village and the operations to be begun immediately. It is to be 40x80 and will contain the post office.

The Catholic church at Fort Fairfield begun last year is now being painted and when done will be a commodious and attractive place of worship. There are a large number of Catholics at Fort Fairfield and this church is built by them at their own expense wholly with no aid from abroad.

The Bridgewater starch factory began operations last Saturday. The building is new and owned by Geo. Hibbard. There has been already received over five thousand bushels of potatoes. The working capacity of the factory is one thousand bushels per day. The factory is driven by steam and has an engine of twelve horse power made at Bangor by Cyr Hinkley & Egery Iron Works.

The Bridgewater cheese factory closed operations Saturday, September 18th and has made over twelve tons of cheese. It received over one thousand pounds of milk the day it closed.

Cumberland.

The Cumberland Musical Association will hold its sixth annual session in the Baptist church, Falmouth, October 12th and 13th.

Franklin.

The grape crop in Wilton is very good this year but poorly ripened.

Isaac Barrett of Carthage Mills had a Baldwin clean set in one of his young apple trees near the ground, last spring, with three buds on the root, and the whole length of the new growth from the buds including the growth of the branches also was fourteen feet and two inches, the growth from one bud without any branches was four feet and a half.

Potatoes in Carthage are badly damaged by rot.

Knox.

At the cattle show at Camden there was an exhibition of babies. Twelve sweet chubby little innocent beauties, just at that time of life when the world does them honor, sat with their Thomaston mammas all in a row, and apparently without concern, watched the squeezing and pushing going on around the table to get a peep at them. The judges were women and of course they gave the prize to a girl baby.

Oxford.

Typhoid fever continues to be very prevalent in Fryeburg. Several cases have recently resulted fatally.

Mary Lary, of Gilead, an aged lady, residing with her son, fell a few days since and broke both wrists.

Solon A. Coffin, of Gilead, lost two valuable sows some ten days ago, by eating mushrooms.

Bears are preying on the sheep in Gilead.

D. D. W. Abbott, of Mt. Zircon farm, died at his residence on Zircon Hill in Milton plantation on the 26th ult., aged 47.

Eight divorces have been granted by the S. J. Court in Oxford county. Four were on petition of the husband.

Last Saturday night the ground froze in Bethel to the depth of two inches, damaging potatoes and other crops.

A lecture course is soon to open in Fryeburg, under the auspices of the Methodist society. Among the lecturers are Mrs. Zimmerman and Mr. Pilsbado of Manchester, N. H., who opens the course.

Piscataquis.

The next meeting of the Piscataquis Teachers' Association will be held at Abbot Upper Village, Saturday, Nov. 6th.

Washington.

The Journal says that the next semi-annual meeting of the Board of Agriculture will be held in Calais on the 2d and 4th of November next. A meeting of the board has never yet been held in Washington co. yet.

York.

Robert Wilson was found at the Biddeford Saco Journal building in the depot yesterday. He had drank the depot water and brought it up and the surprise may be imagined when he found it was his own child, five years old. The little fellow is doing well.

Monday the fifth inst. the one hundredth birthday of William Phenix was observed at Lebanon. Rumford. Some of the members of his family were present. Five generations were represented. A birthday cake bearing the date 1775 was presented to Mr. Phenix on behalf of the Rev. Mr. Tard of Limerick, who is a descendant of the family.

An Unanswerable Argument.

The strongest argument which can be urged against the use of intoxicating liquors is the testimony of those who have formerly been addicted to the use of the same, but who have been induced to abandon the use of the same, and who have found some article which shall be a substitute for the same, and who have found that the use of the same has brought them back to health and happiness. Such testimony we have in abundance in regard to the efficacy of Hop Bitters. It is a matter of common notoriety throughout the country, which not only the temperate and moderate drinkers, but the drunkards, have been restored to health and happiness by the use of Hop Bitters. The testimony of thousands upon thousands of persons, that Hop Bitters is not a drink, but a medicine, and that its effects are permanent and not temporary, is conclusive. Judge for yourselves. The Bitters can be obtained everywhere, and it is the duty of every one who is sick to avail themselves of the blessings which are offered them in Hop Bitters. See advertisement.

WAS IT TIMELY?

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

That the President made a speech at Des Moines the other day, and a very good one, seems to trouble a certain class of people almost as much as his long course of refraining from speech-making did. Something new to quibble about is to them of the nature of a god-send, and they show their gratitude by their diligence in fault-finding. Possibly the speech was unnecessary, but if we have come to the time that we are to have only necessary speeches in this country, either from the President or less important folk, there is a crisis at hand for which not sufficient preparation has been made. The President's speech was quite as necessary as any other that was made there, and much more interesting than some of them. In the face of notorious facts of significant import, that have lately been forced upon public attention, it was proper enough for the President, or for any one else called upon to make talk at the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee, to consider whether the Republic was likely to be distracted by a great conflict concerning the fundamental principles of its Constitution, and to warn the citizens who heard him to take thought beforehand for its prevention. This is what the President did, and the disappointment because he talked sensibly and earnestly upon a matter of national concern is provoking almost as much fine sarcastic writing as if he had actually seized the occasion to eulogize a litter of bull-pups.

Mr Gladstone in England has thought it worth while again and again to raise a warning voice there against the encroachments of a power that threatens English liberty. We believe the liberal and independent journals of the kingdom have not thought it becoming to sneer at him for showing so much regard for the future of his country. The President, in few but well-chosen and weighty words, has spoken out what he thinks with regard to the future security of our institutions. If we are to have, he says,—mark the y—if we are to have another contest in the near future, it will not be a sectional one, but one in which the dividing line will be between patriotism and intelligence on the one side and superstition, ambition and ignorance on the other. There are two things about this declaration that ought to afford the Democratic and Independent press much satisfaction. The President makes it very clear that he at least doesn't lie awake nights through fear of the new war which some of our slow-moving statesmen expect the South is determined upon. He shows also that he substantially agrees with Dr Woolsey, Mr. Adams and many other wise and sagacious citizens, as to what is the present most threatening peril of the republic. Why it should be proper for them to set forth their views in long orations and written articles, and improper for him to do it in a five-minutes speech, is only less intelligible than why certain journals should think such opinions very praiseworthy in these gentlemen and very absurd in the President.

The President believes that this Centennial year of the establishment of the Republic is a good time to set about the work of strengthening its foundations. Is he not right? And if he is right, is it not eminently proper that he should utter the sentiment? Nor does he leave us at a loss as to what he means by these words: "Let us all labor to add all needful guarantees for the greater security of free thought, free speech, a free press, pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments and equal rights. Let us encourage free schools, and keep them free from pagan, atheistical or sectarian control. Let us guard against the union of church and state. "With these safeguards the battles which created the army of the Tennessee will not have been fought in vain." That is to say, the Republic preserved by the Union armies will continue in integrity, honor and usefulness. It seems to us that this is a very proper appeal for the Chief Magistrate to make, and that it is likely to do a great deal of good.

There are those who affect to think the danger of such a conflict as he foreboded is not imminent. The truth is, it is now upon us, and it is high time we were made aware of it. In some States they are now in the thickest of the fight. What is the contest in Ohio but one between intelligence and patriotism on one side, and ambition and ignorance on the other? The same contest is waging in other States, not always about the same expressed issue, but between the same classes of people. The lines are not closely and exclusively drawn, for they never are in such a conflict; but as between the controlling interests in the several camps the characterization will hold now, and it will be more conspicuous as the fight goes on. Here in New England, to be sure, the forces are more mingled than in the West or the South; but we cannot escape being summoned to range ourselves with one or the other party, unless fortunately the issues now becoming prominent get settled right in the localities where they have arisen before we become involved in them.

The President has thrown his great influence at a good time, but not at all too soon, into the right scale, and his speech should be hailed with satisfaction, not with carping; and so it will be by those whose prejudices do not make them blind to his virtues and to the signs of the times.

Among those spoken of to fill the vacancy in the Superintendency of the European and North American Railroad, since the publication of the rumor that Superintendent Angell intends to resign, says the Boston Journal, are Levi L. Lincoln of Augusta, formerly Superintendent of the Maine Central, and Albion F. Kersey, formerly General Freight Agent of the same road.

Cardinal Manning recently addressed a meeting of Roman Catholics in London, held on the site of the new Cathedral, which it is stated will cost $1,400,000, and be 100 years in building. The Cardinal remarked that Noah was 120 years in building the Ark, and that he thought should prevent the founders and builders of the new Cathedral from giving way to despondency.

[illegible] of the condition and maintenance [illegible] money has been paid. A Senator he can be tried only by the [illegible] constituted as a court of justice.

The Sacramento Record says that bee culture is spreading rapidly in California. It is estimated that 100,000,000 pounds of honey will be produced next year, which will sell for $20,000,000, or as much as the sugar and molasses crop of Louisiana, Texas and Florida.

William W. Crapo, of New Bedford, was finally successful in the First Massachusetts District Convention Wednesday. The campaign has been long and animated, and it will be universally conceded that the nominee is every way worthy of the honor.

Wendell Phillips, in his latest rag-money letter, speaks of the fluctuations in the value of gold during the war, as if he didn't know the fluctuations were really in the paper money. Gold hasn't changed in value perceptibly in the last twenty years.

There is a young man in San Francisco who seems just now to be the especial butt of the mischievous fates. Some five or six months ago he fell from a street car, breaking one of his legs, and while under treatment and getting along finely, got up from bed one night in a delirium and drank a quantity of liquids which he found. During the same night he got up again, breaking his leg a second time, the setting of inflammation making amputation necessary. He got through it all safely, and on being discharged from the hospital received from a friend an outfit of underclothing, which was taken from him by a footpad as he was hobbling toward his home. Such a series of misfortunes is not often met with.

An English traveller, Mr. Hurlbourne, gave the British Association, the other day, an account of the Weddas, a wild tribe, which live in the interior of Ceylon. These Weddas are about five feet high, live on water and roast monkey, and are, he reports, incapable of laughter. After trying every way to make their chief laugh, and failing, he asked in amazement whether they ever laughed. "No," replied the Weddas; "why should we? What is there to laugh at?" Sure enough.

While the Chairman of the Mississippi Democratic State Central Committee telegraphed to the General Government that the white citizens of the State would aid Gov. Ames, in the absence of organized militia force, to preserve the peace, his organ, the Vicksburg Herald, printed the following advice to its readers:

"We have only to say to our gallant young men, avoid Ames and his militia as you would a pestilence. * * * You can keep the peace and preserve order, whenever it is necessary, without the badge of Ames, or recognizing his militia in any way. You will best preserve your own self-respect by having nothing to do with his wicked, unlawful and unconstitutional standing army. Bid the fool tyrant avaunt."

A bust of William M. Evarts, by Mr. St. Gaudens, has recently arrived in Boston from Rome. The Boston Courier says of it, "Every one familiar with Mr. Evarts's refined and intellectual countenance will recognize this bust as a remarkably happy likeness of the original. It is spirited and entirely free from the clap-trap look of pomposity and self-consciousness by which inferior artists strive to lend dignity to their work and to atone for the deficiency of their appreciation of fine and important characteristics."

It is creditable to American enterprise that the second attempt to send peaches to England has been attended with complete success. The fruit being in good condition on arrival and having readily found purchasers in London, peach-growers are now assured a larger market for their fruit, which will doubtless be produced in greater quantity to meet the foreign demand. If all perishable fruit and vegetables can be sent cheaply in the same way to Europe, the success of the experiment will proved incalculable value to this productive land.

Scotland is not likely to send many of its sons and daughters to this country during the last quarter of this century. So many people have left that country that those who remain are probably as well off as they would be in any part of the world. A gentleman of Boston who came there many years ago, has just returned from Scotland after an absence of ten years, and reports great changes there. In the rural districts there has been a very large decrease in population. Much of the farm work is done by machinery, but still help is very scarce, and farm laborers and mechanics are steadily employed at wages that afford as comfortable a living as those of that class enjoy in this country.

The amount of sand paper annually produced in the United States is estimated at two hundred thousand reams. Formerly it was made of ordinary brown paper, glue and sand. Now, for the most part, it is made of old rope; the best quality of glue is used, and, instead of sand, pulverized quartz of flint. By this means a superior fabric is produced, of a constantly uniform grade, and at so low a price that the use of it has become greatly extended, large quantities being exported to Europe, South America, the Pacific Islands and elsewhere.

Mr Benjamin Moran, United States Minister to Lisbon, is visiting in London. He was a passenger on the Boyne, which was wrecked on the rocks off Brest in August. Through the lack of discipline on board, all the passengers barely escaped death. They were floating about in boats without tillers and badly leaking, and were rescued by some English wreckers who happened to be in that locality looking for an English steamer which had previously gone down in the same place. A Norwegian bark approached them but coolly sailed away without offering relief. The sailors of the Boyne, as soon as the vessel struck the rocks, broke open the stores and appropriated the liquors, and robbed the passengers' trunks of money, jewelry, and everything of value. Mr. Moran says that his losses were more than $1,750, and that if the Company does not reimburse him he shall have recourse to law.

About twice the number of persons who acknowledge the authority of Pius IX. have lost their pontiff. The Dalai-Lama, head of the Buddhists (who are more than 400,000,000 in number), died recently at Thibet. Like the Pope at Rome, he pretended to be infallible in all questions of faith. Two centuries ago his predecessors actually exercised the spiritual and temporal powers which are coveted by the Pope. Recognized as the incarnation of God, the Buddhists have been in the habit of giving him all the external evidences of veneration which they would give to the Deity. Sitting like a statute on an altar with his limbs crossed, he gave the Buddhist his blessing with various tokens which were supposed to have miraculous virtues. So great was the authority which the Dalai-Lama enjoyed over the Mongolians that in 1720 the Emperor of China rebelled against it, and three of these pontiffs in succession suffered death by violence. Since that time the distinction of declaring who should be the vicegerent of the Buddhist has rested almost entirely with the emperor of the Chinese throne. The death of the pontiff is kept a profound secret until three persons are designated eventually to succeed him, the actual choice being by lot from

ON PARADOX OF TIME.

Time goes, you say?—Ah no!
Alas, time stays, we go;
Or else, were this not so,
Your word to chase the hours,
For youth were always young!
Time goes, you say?—Ah, no!

Ours is the ever death
Of them whose flying feet
Keep time enough, some handiness low,
We pipe, and think we see
The sixties fond sunbed Spa;
Alas, time stays—we go!

Once, in the days of old,
Time looks we on crumbling gold,
And mine but thumed the crow,
Now in the selfsame stage,
We yet reached the silver age;
Time goes, you say?—Ah, no!

Once, when my voice was strong,
I filled the woods with song,
To praise your "rose" and "snow,"
Ev'ry bird, that song, is dead,
Where are your roses fled?
Alas, time stays—we go!

See, in what traversed ways,
What bank ward we delayed
The hours we used to know,
Where are our old desires—
Ah, where those vanished fires?
Time goes, you say?—ah, no!

How far, how far, O, sweet,
The past behind our feet!
Lo! in the sun-glow!
Vow, as the forward way,
Lost, all fold hands and pray,
Alas, time stays—we go!

HOW SHE WAS WON.

BY W. D. EDMONDS.

"Which do I like best?—I can't tell." A young girl said this to herself as she stood on the broad piazza of a great old fashioned mansion that had overlooked the Hudson for a hundred years before the pretty trolloquist was born. Moreover, she pouted and stamped her foot when she said it, and looked altogether like a very wilful and perplexed little beauty,—which she was.

The noble river lay gleaming for miles to right and left of her, cased in ice. The evergreens were grouped in graceful green silhouettes against the drifted lawn. The sky was blue, and the sunlight merry and sparkling, as it is wont on a bright winter afternoon.

But the individual wrapped in seal-skins (which eminently became her), and whose name was Kate Dexter, noticed none of these things. Her tantalizing little mouth was pouted in the direction of two specimens of the other sex, who were sauntering down the lawn towards the river, with skates in their hands, and from whom fled on the winter wind occasional whiffs of smoke, intoxicating cigars.

'No, I can't tell,' she repeated, without stamping this time, and the pout subsided, while an expression not a little grave and very womanly took possession of the defiant black eyes.

'They both love me. I can say that to myself properly enough, and I like both of them so well that—ah there's no telling! How I wish I had Hazzan's magic mirror—talisman—whatever it was,—any thing to prove them! But I haven't, so I must reason for myself, I suppose. Ah, mother! if you were only here!'

The black eyes looked up very sadly, very lovingly. But pretty quickly they wandered back to the figures again.

'There's Mat,—I wouldn't take her advice for the world, and father—oh, he likes Dick, of course,—money. Tom hasn't got that, but Tom has got what father thinks too little of,—a real old fashioned heart. I know he has though he says so little. Dick is forever talking—but talking well I must allow, that is, as far as I can see—and Dick is witty, too. Tom is horribly stupid, though he looks so wise. Dick is full of city news. That house his father left him is lovely, and I might go right out into society, which I do adore. Tom can't even offer me a home in that dull little country town of his, I know. To be sure, I don't care so much about that I've something myself. But really Dick seems much more of a man than Tom which is the greater thing after all. At least, Dick is from his own conversation. And yet—and yet, under Tom's silence there is some great hidden strength, I know. I see it in those blue eyes of his that look so straight, and—tenderly, too. Dick's eyes are everywhere. But then Dick's eyes are handsome enough when you do catch them. They were both nice when they were little fellows. They have grown apart since then, but they look both nice now, too. Poor fellows! they've been here a week and I would as hot walk into the fire as be left alone with either of them.

'I know they are both waiting for a chance to propose, they've said as much already. What shall I do? There's Aunt Miranda peking at the window. I'd rather die than ask her advice, I know exactly what she would say. No, I must decide myself, all alone,—and—well, I can't! Tom is—'

'I say, aren't you ready yet? Come along! it's getting late!' came ringing over the snow from one of the figures, who had both stopped and were now looking impatiently towards the house.

'In a minute. Hurry Mat!' up a clear shriek from the soliquist.

Mat Kate's old nurse, here made her appearance, bearing sundry indespensibles, and in a short time the young folks were skated and gliding.

Skating conversations between three are not worth repeating. That the conversation should be three-handed had been determined on by Miss Kate, and she carried the day, to the disgust, doubtless, of the aforesaid figures. Cousin Dick (they were all cousins and the old house where Miss Kate opened this story was the homestead) raff ed away about the city, his business his club his friends opera theatre, park and mostly himself. Cousin Tom scarce opened his lips, but skated strongly and well, looked thoughtful, and happy and, above all, got Kate's veil for her, when the wind snatched it, before Dick had fairly removed his cigar and settled his hat for the chase.

At last the sun went down, and they went into supper, to Mat's unbounded satisfaction.

This faithful creature had persisted in stamping about the shore, within sight of her young mistress, until her venerable ears were carmine and her nose an exceeding true blue.

At supper were Mr Dexter, grandfather and Kate's papa, Aunt Miranda, spinster, who had rolled unremitting eyes over the skaters during the entire afternoon, sanguinely expecting the drowning that didn't happened, and now looked mildly resigned at the result, and the young people six in all. As Burton says:—

"A number fell to be on that at table."

The rest of the family, which had the goodly habit of gathering in the old nest every Christmas time, had not arrived. From supper they all went into the great old drawing-room. The old gentleman read their papers, Aunt Miranda worked at shoulder braces for the heathen in Alaska, the young people enjoyed themselves as young people usually do, and finally when grandfather drew up his chair to the bright beech fire, in view of an ante-bel toasting, when Mr. Dexter did the same, and Aunt Miranda had laid aside the Alaska shoulder braces for a real substantial warmth, the young people drew up their chairs, too, and began gazing into the coals as intently as the old folks.

Now when the people gaze long at the fire during Christmas tide, especially when the wind howling down the chimney as it was that night, then often behinds them of ghost stories. And so it happened that Grandfather Dexter was prevailed upon, ostensibly much against his will, but really to the old gentleman's inward delight, to tell a story about the old place.

The lamps were straightway turned down by the young men, and the ruddy firelight, now master of the situation, glowed and danced, over the interested faces of three cousins, and made a mockery of Aunt Miranda's primness by shadowing her as a leaping grimpsin on the opposite wall. For a half hour, about grandfather's stories were of no intermission sort, nothing was heard in the room save the old gentleman's crackled and monotonous voice, the mapping of the logs, and an occasional snore from Dorothy.

The story was full of horrors, as it was grandfather's delight to paint his tales. A governess, during the Revolution, had been brought up by gaining her neck between the railings on some occasion, if I mistake not, which fact and both a ghost and a murder were connected. Moreover, grandfather affirmed that she had once visited him when he was a young man, that a dance she brought with, caused, that he was just stagnating, when a fortunate cock-crow sent the ghostly old bedlamite up the chimney, and left him alive, indeed, but with a half-broken neck. In proof of this, grandfather called attention to his throat, which was certainly uncomely enough to prove its having been wrung by a ghost. In further corroboration, the mysterious death of coachman Jones, in '67, was cited, the poor fellow having been found dead in his bed in the aisle, with terrible blue bruises all down his throat. However, the ghost was not yet satisfied, grandfather explained, in order to prelude any feeling of relief on the part of his listeners at the coachman's death. She had disappeared for many years, 'twas true; but had of late been seen by the gardener. Are as for his part, grandfather was sure he had heard her the night before, crawling down the garret stairs. Here he paused, and rubbed his neck ominously.

(To be concluded.)

MUST GRIN AND BEAR IT.

HE GRINS WITH JOY.

LEXINGTON, MASS., June 23, 1875.

PROF. ALPHONSE HILLER.

DEAR SIR,—For the alleviation of human suffering I feel a my duty as well as pleasure to certify to the following facts in my own case

The past spring I was sore afflicted with Sciatic Rheumatism, so bad at night after night and all night, without the least cessation, the most excruciating pains I ever knew. My doctor who practiced in my family for over thirty years, to my entire satisfaction, and in whom I still have the utmost confidence, said that "medicine would do me no good—he could not help me, time probably would, at least in six or eight weeks it might leave me, in the meantime I must grin and bear it." But I was not disposed to do so, and I to my despair, caught at the first article, which under the name of Quack or Patent Medicine, or any other remedy, promised relief. It happened that this was the obtained at No. 28 Hanover st., Boston, the statements accompanying directions seemed reasonable, and I determined to give it a fair trial. I did so, at the same time being without faith in the efficacy of the medicine. I followed the directions, and the results were that on using the third bottle I was sensible that it was acting powerfully and favorably, and before using the fourth bottle, my pain had passed away, and I now have occasion to grin (with joy) that I no longer have to bear them.

Yours respectfully,

WM. H. PHELPS

We endorse the above testimonial of Rheumatism.

G. C. GOODWIN & CO.,

28 Hanover Street.

Mr Phelps is a gentleman well and favorably known in this community, and for the past forty years has been recognized by our shipping merchants as one of the most successful captains sailing from the port of Boston. This testimony is genuine and speaks more than volumes could express, in favor of the great merits of the Diamond Rheumatic Cure.

This medicine is prepared by a careful, experienced and accomplished physician, in obedience to the desire of numberless friends in the profession, in the trade and among the people. Every bottle is warranted to contain the full strength of the medicine in its highest state of purity and development, and is superior to any medicine ever compounded for the terrible complaints.

In simple cases sometimes one or two doses suffice. In the most chronic cases it is sure to give ease by the use of four or five bottles. By this efficient and simple remedy, hundreds of dollars are saved to those who can least afford to throw it away, as surely it is by the purchase of useless prescriptions.

This medicine is for sale at all druggists' through out the United States and Canada. If it happens that your druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the wholesale druggists in Boston, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Portland, Bangor and other places.

Price $1 a Bottle.
